WHAT THE SERVICE RECORDS SHOW AI-generated interpretation

There are 18 service records dating from November 2017. The latest service record is from September 29, 2026. No service records are dated before November 2017, which is approximately 40 months after the first title or registration record. service · service-record gap

No service record is dated before Nov 1, 2017 (29,365 mi); the first title or registration record is Jul 25, 2014, 40 months earlier (about 3 years). Records of other kinds are dated in between (title or registration records and auction reports), so this is a gap in service records, not in the history. - The completion status of recall campaigns is not confirmed for this VIN. It is crucial to verify this with a dealership.

How to read this report

The complete vehicle history lists every record returned, oldest first. A record repeated in several sections of the source appears once and names each section; records that share a date but list different work stay separate and are grouped, and they may describe one visit.

Dates are shown at the precision the source gave. Mileage is as recorded and estimates are labelled; reported readings do not independently certify actual mileage. An inspection entry records that an inspection took place; an outcome is shown only where the source states one.

The small references after a statement (E## timeline entries, R# campaigns, AC# accident records, OW# owners, KP# complaint patterns) link to the records behind it.

Terms used in this report

A vehicle history report covers available records, not every event in a vehicle's life. Absence of a record means none was returned by our sources - not that the event did not happen. This report does not certify safety, mechanical condition, title eligibility or future reliability. Use this report alongside an independent inspection.
